WHAT IS IT . . . AND

WHAT CAN IT DO FOR YOU?

EXECUTIVE OVERVIEW

Businesspersons Between Jobs (BBJ), a non-profit, non-sectarian, voluntary support organization is dedicated to helping Greater St. Louis executives and professionals involved in a career transition. BBJ is open to men and women of all races, religions and creeds.

Founded in 1972 by Pastor Howard Gleason and sponsored by St. Mark Presbyterian Church which provides material support and a meeting location, BBJ continues today as a non sectarian, not-for-profit organization offering a variety of programs and resources to help its' members re-establish their professional careers.

A volunteer staff of devoted, experienced business professionals provides a supportive framework for BBJ's services and a guiding light for directing members in helping each other achieve their common goal. The members, elected officers and an executive director, accomplish all the work.

ASSISTING REGIONAL EMPLOYERS

BBJ provides an excellent reservoir of highly qualified professional talent from all professional disciplines. Highly skilled, professionals from accountants to zoologists, middle to executive level managers are available for full-time or consultant positions. What does this pool of talent provide to your company?

- Highly skilled employees available on a no-fee basis.
- Employees able to start immediately.
- For the St. Louis Area based company, there is no cost of relocation.

This all benefits the employer by providing a reduction in costly and time-consuming search processes.

As American business continues to adjust to sweeping changes, many companies in the area are utilizing BBJ to find the professional talent they need.

BBJ welcomes your participation in sharing our mutual need of job placement and solving problems associated with periods of transition for executives and professionals
